And no, we will not put you into an ABC (Another Bloody Cathedral or Coal mine) but tell you the personal stories of our members together during your stay in the Netherlands.

After landing, lunch will be served, avoiding raw fish and plenty of coffee and tea will be served. After lunch, we will visit the Flying Museum at Seppe International Airport.

The old Flying machines at the museum will be available to fly on the Sunday. So people, please select your plane already on Friday. Please note that this cost is not included in the price of this Fly-in weekend)

The airfield is also home to a small flying museum, Vliegend Museum Seppe (The Flying Museum of Seppe), having various aircraft, most of which are still airworthy, including two de Havilland Tiger Moths, a Boeing Stearman and a Yakovlev Yak-52.

Leaving our wives at the many shopping centres in the area, while the men have a serious talk together.

Humphrey's restaurant will serve us a nice 3 courses meal with drinks included. Do not forget to let us know your personal favourites, fish, meat or veggie...

SATURDAY June 24th

On Saturday your IFFR tour guide Maurice will lead you to the secrets of the Royal Military Academy where he studied in the stone ages. Personal stories will enlighten the secret world of the Dutch officers Academy.

Royal Military Academy, Breda

During the visit, Maurice will share the juice details..for sure.

The Royal Military Academy (Dutch: Koninklijke Militaire Academie or KMA) is the service academy for the Dutch Army, the Dutch Air Force and the Royal Marechaussee. Located in Breda, Southern Netherlands, the KMA has trained future officers since 1828.

The KMA offers a programme of study which lasts four or five years, depending on the academic major cadets choose.[1] Academic programmes have changed significantly during its history. In today's programme cadets are awarded a bachelor's degree upon graduation and commissioned in the Royal Netherlands Army, the Royal Netherlands Air Force or the Royal Marechaussee.[1] The KMA also offers a shortened officers course of one and a half years.[2] The training of the officers of the Royal Netherlands Navy and the Korps Mariniers is mainly done by the Royal Netherlands Naval College in Den Helder. The campus is about one kilometre square.

oh no...another bloody cathedral in Breda :)

RESTAURANTS in BREDA
Humpreys restaurant
Big Belly

We conclude this visit in our favourite lunch stop with its teasing name Big Belly Restaurant. Not only lunch will be served but also a beer tasting experience will follow.

And to make sure you will be entertained, a personalised Pub Quiz with Aviation and membership related questions will follow after lunch. An absolute hilarious happening, where we get to know each other better.

For those who prefer to discover Breda, the city center is just around the corner. Enjoy the mixture of modern and also authentic shopping malls and shops.

Walking through the streets of Breda, you wander from one historic building to another. And that's not surprising, with the rich history the city has to offer. The tranquillity of the Beguinage, the impressive "Grote Kerk" and the old Breda Castle. Are you more into street art? The Blind Walls Gallery is a growing collection of more than 80 murals created by international artists. Each painting is based on a Breda story that fits the location. Walk along the street art and be surprised.

After a small break we will be gathering together to have our famous Gala dinner in Black tie and women (and/or men) in their most beautiful dresses.

The hotel named after our IFFR Benelux president Keyser will serve us nice food, accompanied with some drinks. Music will guide us through the evening. But be aware, we are not allowed to keep other hotel guests awake.

SUNDAY 25th June
